Library Education News

East Carolina University

Department of Library Science

The entire summer schedule for both sessions was set up in three and four week workshops. Due to extended contracts and professional obligations of librarians in the state, it has become difficult for many of them to attend a full six weeks session. Librarians as well as regular students responded to this new arrangement of concentrated study quite well. The largest attendance was in two special workshops that are not regular courses. "Public Relations in Libraries" was available the first session with registrants compiling an annual public relations program for the library/media center in which they are employed or their organization of interest. Consultants from differing types of libraries contributed their ideas. "Organization of Media Collections" also had a very large enrollment the first session. The other special workshop "Bibliotherapy," was on the schedule for second session. Enrollees which included librarians, social workers, nurses, educators, recreation and physical educators compiled projects for use in prescribed reading, listening, and viewing.

Phillis B. Cartwright, Associate Librarian, American International University in Miami, conducted two workshops the latter part of the summer concerned with automation in libraries and advanced cataloging and classification. Students reacted very favorably to this visiting instructor's realistic and practical approach to problems in this area.

Joining the faculty in the fall quarter will be Ludi W. Johnson who comes to East Carolina from the University of Florida in Gainesville. She holds degrees from the University of the State of New York (Geneseo), the University of California at Los Angeles, and the University of Illinois. She will direct the courses in the curriculum involving school media work. Having had experience in military libraries, elementary and secondary school libraries, public, college and university libraries, she has been in library education for seven years. She will replace Lois T. Berry who is returning to Virginia to complete her retirement in that state. She has also been quite active in professional organizations in both Illinois and Florida. She has three children in college and one who will live with her in Greenville.

Recipients of teaching fellowships and research assistantships in the Department for the 1973-74 school year have been announced. Among those who will be in this capacity are Kay Scott Bullard, A.B., UNC-CH, of Fair Bluff; Lee R. McLaughlin, B.S., East Carolina, of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania and Camp Lejeune; Jody Leigh Mann, B.S., East Carolina, M.E., Virginia State College, of Colonial Heights, Virginia; and Talmadge Andrew Wall, B.S., Pembroke State University, of Wake Forest.

Major fall offerings in the Department at the graduate level will include "Media Collection Building," "Administration of School Media Programs," "Organization of Media Collections," "Field Work," "Government Publications," "Bibliography of the Social Sciences," "Supervision of Media Services," "Independent Study," "Educational Communications Methods and Materials," "Design of Multimedia Instructional Materials," and "Theory of Educational Communications." Many of these courses are offered in the late afternoon or at night making it possible for persons out in the field to continue their education or update themselves in various problem areas.

School of Library Science

The 1973 group of 24 graduates was the highest number since 1962 (25). It included eight who were the first to become Early Childhood Library Specialists, five with emphasis upon public library service; and eight who prepared to become academic librarians.

An Office of Education funded workshop to acquaint public librarians with the School's program of "Newer Materials, Methods, and Services for Young Children" was directed by Mrs. Tommie M. Young May 29-30. She was assisted by Mrs. Lillian White and Mrs. Evelyn Toole of NCCU. Miss Jane Wilson, Consultant for Children's Services, North Carolina State Library and Mrs. Lucile Thomas, Supervisor, John Step-toe, Early Childhood Library, Brooklyn, N. Y. were visiting lecturers. There were nineteen participants, eighteen from North Carolina.

A General Mills Foundation grant funded an "Institute in Uses of Newer Media in Child Development Programs" for paraprofessionals July 16-20. There were 25 participants and 12 observers. It was directed by Tommie M. Young, assisted by her staff, with the following visiting lecturers: Mrs. Bertha Parker Phillips, Coordinator, Children's Services, Atlanta Public Library; Ms. Faye Ross, Follow-Through Project, Atlanta Public Schools; Mrs. Ruth Woodson, Consultant, Kindergarten-Elementary Division, North Carolina State Department of Public Instruction.

An unrestricted, three-year grant of $150,000 has been given to the School by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. It is expected that the funds will be used for personnel and scholarships in 1973/74.

A grant of $20,000 from the Xerox Corporation is being used to strengthen the practicum experiences of students in the Early Childhood Library Specialist Program. School and Durham Public Library representatives are cooperating to set up an early learning materials loan collection at the Stanford L. Warren Branch. The two staffs will also collaborate in developing a training kit.

Office of Education grants for 1973-74 are $35,200 to support five students in the Early Childhood Library Specialist Program and $29,998 to partially fund the African-American Materials Project. One recipient of an OE fellowship is Jennifer Smith, a 1973 NCCU graduate who won the Chancellor's Cup for having the highest cumulative average in her class.

Visiting summer faculty included David Jensen, Librarian, Greensboro College and Viola Lawrence, Librarian, Merrick-Moore School. Miriam Ricks, former Raleigh school librarian who earned an advanced certificate from the University of Denver as a Knapp Fellow in 1973, taught during the summer and will begin to direct the Early Childhood Library Specialists Program in the fall. Carol Hall, a 1973 M.L.S. graduate from Atlanta University, is now Assistant Director of the African-American Materials Project. Desretta McAllister, formerly on the staff at Morgan College; and P. Grady Morein, a doctoral candidate at Louisiana State University, joined the regular faculty. An advanced course in library management and planning is being added to the curriculum for the first semester.

The staff of the African-American Materials Project, with Geraldine Matthews as editor, has completed a list of Black Authors of Pre-1950 imprints.

Annette L. Phinazee testified at the hearing of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science in Atlanta on March 7. A written statement had been submitted earlier. She read a paper at an Institute for Training Librarians for Special Black Collections and Archives at Alabama State University on April 14, and she was Chairman of the planning committee and a Recorder for the ALA Intellectual Freedom Workshop held in Chicago April 16-17.

In July Dr. Phinazee gave two lectures on "Training of Paraprofessionals in Organizing Resource Materials" for an H.E.A. Institute for Training of Professional and Paraprofessional Library Media Specialists sponsored by the School of Library Media, Alabama A & M University.

North Carolina Central University's School of Library Science has received a grant of $29,998 from the Bureau of Libraries and Learning Resources of the U. S. Office of Education. The grant is for completion of a six-state African-American Materials Project.

The grant is less than half that given the project in 1972-73. Additional funding will be sought.

The grant provides support only for the development of publishable manuscripts from data previously collected by librarians at six predominantly black universities. Support had been asked for further data collection.

Previous support by the Bureau of Libraries and Learning Resources, totaling $127,944, had permitted the identification of a number of collections of books periodicals, and manuscripts by and about black Americans in the six-state area, which includes North Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia, South Carolina, and Alabama.

Project members had hoped to continue to identify and locate these collections.

Instead, support was given only for the employment of the project's assistant director and library assistant, and of a three member advisory board, including an advisory editor, to compile the collected information in publishable form.

Dr. Phinazee reports: "The NCCU School of Library Science accepted the grant under these conditions, because it was considered to be even worse to discontinue this first cooperative effort to identify and coordinate African-American materials.

"The headquarters director (Dr. Phinazee) and state coordinators will continue to contribute their services and collect as much data as possible. In the meantime, efforts are being made to obtain the additional funds from other sources."

State coordinators include Casper L. Jordan, Atlanta University; Mrs. Jessie C. Smith, Fisk University; Jason C. Grant III, Hampton Institute; Mrs. Sadie S. Hughley, North Carolina Central; Mrs. Lillie S. Walker, South Carolina State College; and Mrs. Annie G. King, Tuskegee Institute."

Dean Edward G. Holley has been elected vice-president and president-elect of the American Library Association.

He will serve one year as vice-president, assuming the duties of president in 1974. Installation was June 25 at the ALA conference in Las Vegas.

Dr. Doralyn Hickey, Associate Professor of Library Science, has been awarded the Margaret Mann Citation in Cataloging and Classification of the American Library Association. Presentation of the Margaret Mann Citation was made in Las Vegas at the annual summer conference of the American Library Association. Dr. Hickey is the second professor from the University of North Carolina to win the Margaret Mann Citation. Dr. Susan Grey Akers, Dean Emerita, won the citation in 1956. In receiving this honor Dr. Hickey joins a group of distinguished librarians in the field of cataloging and classification who have received the award since its establishment in 1951.

The Margaret Mann Citation is awarded annually for outstanding professional achievement in cataloging or classification, either through publication of significant professional literature, participation in professional cataloging associations, or valuable contributions to practice in individual libraries.

The citation awarded to Dr. Hickey read:

The Margaret Mann Citation in Cataloging and Classification is awarded in 1973 to Doralyn J. Hickey for her many outstanding contributions in all aspects of the field. Her practical experience in cataloging, her many association activities, her ability as a consultant, her numerous, always penetrating publications, all combine to produce a dynamic and perceptive teacher in a difficult and most demanding part of our profession. By her enthusiastic teaching, Dr. Hickey has encouraged many of her students to become effective in the field of cataloging and classification, so that they, too, may make their own contributions.

Dr. Hickey joined the faculty of the School of Library Science in 1962. She has served on the staffs of Rice University and Duke University, and has taught in summer sessions at the University of Wisconsin and the University of Minnesota. Active in many professional associations, she is currently a member of the American Library Association's Committee on Accreditation, and has served most recently as Vice Chairman of the Decimal Classification Editorial Policy Committee. Author of a number of articles and book reviews, Dr. Hickey's book, Problems in Organizing Library Collections, was published by the Bowker Company last year.

Mary E. Kingsbury will join the faculty of the School of Library Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for the fall term, 1973, as Assistant Professor of Library Science. Dr. Kingsbury will teach classes in children's literature and the literature of the social sciences, and help with the development of programs for school librarians.

A native of Sioux City, Iowa, Miss Kingsbury holds a B.A. degree from Briar Cliff College, an M.A. in Library Science from Rosary, an M.Ed. from Oregon State University, and a Ph.D. degree from the University of Oregon. Her doctoral dissertation title is "The Transmission of Cultural Values through Children's Literature," and she has published articles in the JOURNAL OF EDUCATION FOR LIBRARIANSHIP and LIBRARY JOURNAL.

Professor Kingsbury has previously been a high school librarian in Nebraska and Oregon and most recently has taught at Portland State University and the School of Librarianship, University of Washington (Seattle). She holds membership in the American Library Association, the Oregon Library Association, and the American Association of University Professors.

The Board of Trustees approved a six-months' leave of absence for Dr. Raymond L. Carpenter, Jr., Associate Professor of Library Science, to accept a Fulbright-Hays Award. Professor Carpenter will spend the first six months of 1974 in Italy where he will be attached to the University of Rome. Professor Carpenter will survey existing and proposed library/information science programs of research and education, emphasizing services and centers for population-concerned agencies and urban planners. His study will be sociological in orientation, seeking to analyze the structure of the organizations and to aid in developing a systems model for such services.

Dr. Carpenter has been a faculty member at the School of Library Science of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill since 1959 and Associate Professor since 1968. He has held research contracts with NASA and the U. S. Office of Education and most recently has published articles dealing with personnel and salaries of public libraries.

Professor Fred Roper attended the annual meeting of the Medical Library Association in Kansas City in early June. He is the new Chairman of the Continuing Education Committee of that organization.

In July Professor Roper gave a workshop to faculty members of Hampden-Sydney College, Hampden-Sydney, Va. He will participate in the Asian Conference for Population Librarians September 5-12, 1973 to be held in Bangkok, Thailand.

The School of Library Science will offer the following courses in the evening during the spring term of 1974. We invite applications from practicing librarians for limited space in these classes. Please contact Miss Jean Freeman, Assistant to the Dean, if you would like to attend.

University of North Carolina at Greensboro

Library Education/Instructional Media Program

On June 15, 1973, the Library Education/Instructional Media Program, School of Education, received a grant award in the amount of $35,200 to support five (5) master's level fellowships for education in librarianship for the 1973-74 academic year plus one term of the 1974 Summer Session.

The fellowships, designed to prepare recipients for leadership roles in school library/media service at the individual school or school district level, will support full-time study leading to the master's (M.Ed.) degree with concentration in Library Education.

Tuition and fees for fellowship recipients will be paid by the University, and each fellow will receive a stipend of $3,000, plus a dependency allowance of $600 for each eligible dependent.

Information releases and application materials, distributed nationwide following the notification of the award on June 15, resulted in the receipt (by the deadline of July 27) of applications from 52 applicants representing 11 states, the District of Columbia, and the Virgin Islands. All applications were reviewed by a panel composed of the faculty members in the Library Education/Instructional Media Program and representatives of cooperating agencies, including the Division of Educational Media, State Department of Public Instruction, and the Media Services Department, Greensboro Public Schools.

Priority for fellowship awards was based on the following factors:

Eligibility for admission to the Graduate School in the master's degree program

Promise of sustained contribution to the profession

Demonstrated interest in education and/or school library/media service

Evidence of commitment to library/media service to disadvantaged children and youth

Membership in a minority group, with preference given to Black applicants

The five fellowship recipients selected for 1973-74 are:

Miss Marilyn Sue Locklear, Maxton, North Carolina. B.S., Pembroke State University, 1973 (Elementary Education)

Miss Nolia L. Milligan, Frederiksted, St. Croix, Virgin Islands. B.S., Catholic University of Puerto Rico, 1969 (Mathematics). Further study, Teachers College, Columbia University (summer, 1971). Experience: Mathematics teacher, junior high school.

Mr. Madison M. Mosley, Jr., Leesburg, Florida. B.A., Florida State University, 1971 (Library Science, English). Experience: School librarian.

Miss Nancy D. Owens, Columbia, North Carolina. B.S., North Carolina A & T State University, 1970 (Political Science). Further study, UNC at Greensboro (summers, 1972, 1973). Experience: Social studies teacher.

Mrs. Gladys M. Shannon, Fayetteville and Greensboro, North Carolina. B.A., Bennett College, 1948 (English). Further study: University of Colorado, Colorado College, other Experience: Supervisory librarian, U. S. Civil Service.

Special national priorities to be emphasized in the fellowship program for 1973-74 will include the design and implementation of library/media service to disadvantaged children and youth. Each fellow's program will be planned in terms of the degree requirements, the fellow's previous preparation and experience, and his/her professional goals. Guided field experience will be provided throughout the program, along with seminars with participation by representatives of school and public library service, community agencies serving the disadvantaged, university and state education agency personnel, and other resource persons.

Program director for the Fellowships for Education in Librarianship, 1973-74, is Mrs. Mary Frances K. Johnson, Associate Professor and Chairman, Library Education/Instructional Media Program, School of Education, University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The University of North Carolina at Greensboro is one of 28 universities receiving fellowship awards for 1973-74 to support master's study in Education for Librarianship.

Grant source: Title II-B, Higher Education Act of 1965, P.L. 89-329, as amended

Funding agency: Bureau of Libraries and Learning Resources, Office of Education, U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

How much can a subscription agency save your library?

Consider how long it takes to order one subscription, how much it costs to process one invoice for payment and send one check. Estimates run from $10.00 to $18.00 for each order. Multiply by the number of subscriptions your library orders, and see how much you'll save by sending one order and one check for all your periodicals to F. W. Faxon Co.
