Appalachian State University

Department of Educational Media

Three new faculty members have joined the staff of the Department of Educational Media at Appalachian State University in Boone.

Dr. Nancy Bush is the college and public library specialist on the faculty. She has a Ph.D. and M.S.L.S. from Florida State University and has completed postdoctoral studies in Educational Administration there. Dr. Bush has worked at Public Libraries in Jacksonville and Miami, Florida; has taught at schools in West Chester and Pottstown, Pennsylvania; was a Visiting Lecturer and Research Assistant, Florida State University Library School; and also served as a copy editor, N. W. Ayer Company.

Miss Sandra Leftwich, a candidate for the Ed.D. degree from the University of Tennessee in Curriculum Development holds a M.S.L.S. from the same school; an M.A. from the University of Virginia; and a B.A. from Vanderbilt University. She has experience as a librarian and as a teacher of English and Social Studies in schools in Knoxville, Nashville, and Kingsport in Tennessee; and Wheaton High School, Maryland. She is a member of the editorial board for the A.A.S.L. publication, Educational Media. She will be a specialist in School Media Centers and Young People's Literature.

Mr. Roger Gaither, a doctoral candidate in Audiovisual Communications, Research and Production at Indiana State University, will be research and instructional design specialist for the department's new programs in educational media. His other degree work in Fine Arts, Art Education, and Psychology will be used in interdisciplinary involvement of the new department. Mr. Gaither has worked as a research assistant in evaluation and development for the Media Study Curriculum Project, Southwest Iowa Learning Resources Center and was animation art director and production supervisor, Audiovisual Motion Picture Department, Indiana University. He designed a computerized system for organization, use and maintenance of an Art Slide Collection and Related Materials for the Art Department of Illinois State University, has contributed to several educational films produced at Indiana State University for National Skills Training Center, and produced a photographic essay, Two Forms, which will soon be published. Among the courses he will teach this fall will be a seminar: Creative Experiences in Educational Media. The purpose of the Seminar is to encourage teachers and media specialists to develop and use imaginative approaches to learning involving educational resources.

Miss Eunice Query will continue with the faculty on an emeritus status. The faculty is available for consultation and cooperation with library units in the region. The department welcomes your requests for continuing education and regular program offerings.

Mr. Gaither is currently conducting a National Media Consumption Survey of secondary school students; Miss Leftwich is interested in contacting librarians who will contribute to A.A.S.L. publications; and

Dr. Bush is interested in becoming acquainted with North Carolina community college, university, public and special librarians. Dr. Cox has returned to her duties as chairman of the new Department of Educational Media after a vacation spent in Brazil. Plans for winter quarter events are now in progress. Please contact Dr. Cox or other members of the faculty by phone or letter as soon as possible of your needs and interests for winter, spring, and summer programs.

East Carolina University

Department of Library Science

Short-term summer workshops were a success with record enrollments. Student participants represented sixteen states and Canada. The entire second session was devoted to this type instruction. All faculty members taught at least one session of summer school and spent their additional time enrolled in courses or visitation in Virginia, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, and California. Visiting instructors and lecturers enhanced the summer offerings.

Joining the fall faculty is Donald Edward Collins who comes to East Carolina from the University of Georgia where he served as social science reference librarian. A Miami native, he holds degrees from Florida State University and the University of Georgia. He currently is a Ph.D. candidate and is completing his dissertation. He is married with one child.

Teaching fellowships and research assistantships have been awarded for the 1972-73 school year to Bocksoon Kim, Seoul, Korea; Rita S. Mullins, Morehead City; Francis J. Scalzi, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; and Judith M. Thompson, Elizabeth City. They are all seeking the Master of Library Science degree.

Leading the Alpha Eta Chapter of Alpha Beta Alpha, national undergraduate library science fraternity this year is Barbara Alcorn, Greenville, as president. Other new officers include Lee McLaughlin, Camp Lejeune; Jo Bainbridge, Hampton, Virginia; Peggy Williams, Charlotte; Brenda McCoy, Portsmouth, Virginia; and Lynda Stine, Greenville. During the past school year the fraternity sponsored several outstanding speakers, assisted the campus psychology fraternity to set up their library, and arranged a trip to Washington, D. C. for a special tour of the Library of Congress and other sites.

New course offerings anticipated in the near future include Media Services in Community Colleges and a programming course to supplement the current offering, Automation of Library Processes. Through a request from the Division of Educational Media, State Department of Public Instruction, the fall schedule includes a course designed for audiovisual directors with little training in media organization.

University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

School of Library Science

Because of an awareness of the need for continuing education in librarianship, the School of Library Science will offer several opportunities for practicing librarians to return to Chapel Hill and enroll in formal courses during the spring semester, 1973. The faculty particularly invites applications from five academic and five public librarians for spaces in Library Sciences 310 (a) Seminar in Academic Library Administration, taught by Dean Holley, and 310 (b) Seminar in Public Library Administration, taught by Professor Ken Shearer. This program constitutes an opportunity for practicing librarians and our current master's students to discuss major issues and trends in librarianship at an advanced level for the benefit of both. Topics to be discussed will be determined by the background of the students who enroll. Librarians desiring to participate in these seminars should write to the respective instructor, enclosing a transcript of their highest degree held. Both seminars will meet on Wednesday evening from 7:00 to 9:30 p.m. Tuition and fees are $52.50 per course and registration will be handled by the Extension Division.

Also possible for librarians in the area are the following courses:

Library Science 262, Seminar on Library Resources and Collections, Professor Jerrold Orne, Friday, 2:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Library Science 228, Public Documents, Miss Sangster Parrott, Wednesday, 3:00 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Library Science 251, Advanced Cataloging and Classification, Professor Doralyn Hickey, Mondays, 6:30 to 9:00 p.m.

Library Science 344, Administration of Archives and Manuscript Collections, Dr. Mattie Russell, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 8:00 to 9:15 a.m.

Library Science 345, Seminar in Fine Arts Librarianship, Professor Budd Gambee, Tuesdays and Thursdays 3:30 to 4:45 p.m.

Library Science 347, Seminar in Theological Librarianship, Professor Doralyn Hickey, Tuesdays, 2:00 to 4:30 p.m.

Library Science 348, Seminar in Medical Librarianship, Professor Myrl Ebert, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 3:30 to 4:45 p.m.

Depending upon the interest of librarians in the Charlotte area Professor Doralyn Hickey will offer Library Science 352, Seminar in Problems in Organizing Library Collections at UNC-Charlotte. A minimum of fifteen are required for offering this class. The class will meet on Thursdays, 7:00 to 9:30 p.m.

All of these courses are available to practicing librarians not seeking a degree, though they do carry three hours credit through the Extension Division. However, to apply toward a UNC-Chapel Hill degree the student would have to be admitted to the School of Library Science through normal procedures.

Haynes McMullen

HAYNES McMULLEN, joins the faculty as Professor of Library Science, coming from the same position at Indiana University where he has been a member of the faculty since 1951. Dr. McMullen has had a long and distinguished career in librarianship and library education. He holds an A.B. degree from Centre College, both B.S. and M.S. in L.S. degrees from the University of Illinois, and a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. His various activities have included library positions at the University of Illinois, Western State College (Colorado), Madison College (Virginia), and, since 1951, teaching and research at Indiana University where he has also served as Acting Director and Acting Dean at several intervals. Professor McMullen has been a library consultant to the Institute of Public Administration, Thammasat University, Bangkok, Thailand, and to Kabul University, Afghanistan. His publications record, reflecting his major interest in library history, is extensive and includes the significant journals in library science as well as the field of history. Not only will Professor McMullen bring added distinction to our program in the historical area, but he will also add depth to the research program and bring renewed strength to our humanities literature area, a gap not filled since Professor Robert Miller's resignation in January, 1971. Professor McMullen is noted for his concern for good teaching and personal rapport with his students and will be teaching in the areas of book selection, library history, and humanities literature.

HERMAN H. HENKLE, Executive Director Emeritus, John Crerar Library, Chicago, will be a Visiting Professor at Chapel Hill for the Fall Semester, 1972. He will teach a section of Library Science 130, Organization and Operation of Library Services. Professor Henkle holds an A.B. degree from Whittier College and an M.A. in L.S. from the University of California (Berkeley). In 1961 Whittier conferred upon him an honorary Litt.D. Since his retirement from the John Crerar, one of the great scientific libraries of the country, Professor Henkle has served as consultant to the James Jerome Hill Reference Library, St. Paul, Minn., and has taught in the library schools of the University of Minnesota, Florida State University, and Northern Illinois University. During these periods he was first librarian and then Executive Director of the John Crerar (1947-69), he also taught at the Graduate Library School, University of Chicago. He has served as the President of the Association of American Library Schools and the Special Libraries Association. In 1971 the Special Libraries Association elected him to its Hall of Fame.

With regret the School of Library Science announces the resignation of Assistant Professor FRANCES H. HALL, effective at the end of the second summer term. Professor Hall will return to the practice of librarianship as Associate Law Librarian and Associate Professor at the University of Virginia. In her four years as a member of the School's faculty, Professor Hall has made significant contributions to the teaching of reference and the social sciences generally. She developed a new course, Librarianship and the Law, and our strong program in law librarianship would have been impossible without someone with her extensive background and experience. We regret the loss of her quiet competence, but extend best wishes as she returns to the practice of law librarianship.

DR. DONALD D. HENDRICKS, Director of the South Central Regional Medical Library and Librarian, Southwestern Medical School of the University of Texas at Dallas, will give a public lecture on "Library Networks: Promise and Performance" at 4 p.m. on Wednesday, October 4, in Manning Hall. His speech will summarize data collected from a variety of library networks this spring under a Council on Library Resources Fellowship.

A consultant on centralized processing to libraries in Illinois, the Midwestern Regional Library System in Ontario, Canada, and library systems in Louisiana, Hendricks has previously served as librarian of Milliken College in Decatur, Illinois, and Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, Texas. He has also held research grants from the U.S. Office of Education and the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System. Among his publications are Comparative Costs of Book Processing (1966), Resources of Texas Libraries (1968 with Edward G. Holley), and Centralized Processing and Regional Library Development (1970).

Hendricks is a member of the American Library Association, the Bibliographical Society of America, and the Texas Library Association where he serves on the Executive Board. He holds the A.B. and A.M. degrees from the University of Michigan and a Ph.D. in library science from the University of Illinois.

In accordance with his oft-expressed wish to spend the remainder of his tenure in teaching and research, DR. JERROLD ORNE announced to the library staff on September 11 that he will relinquish his duties as Director of Libraries of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill on December 31, 1972, and will become a full-time member of the faculty of the School of Library Science in January, 1973. Orne, who has been Director of Libraries and Professor of Library Science at UNC since 1957, previously served as Director of Libraries at the Air University, Maxwell Air Force Base, 1951-57, and Washington University (St. Louis), 1946-51. He has been active in numerous professional associations, has served as a consultant to libraries and to such organizations as NASA and NSF, and currently is chairman of the Z39 Committee of the American Standards Association.

Announcing Dr. Orne's addition to the faculty of the School of Library Science, Dr. Edward G. Holley, Dean, noted that "Professor Orne is a distinguished member of the library profession, that he has received within the past year a citation for distinguished service from the American Society for Information Science and the Melvil Dewey Award of the American Library Association for his contributions to the development of international bibliographic standards, that this spring he commuted to Rutgers to teach two doctoral seminars, that he is a former editor of both American Documentation and South-eastern Librarian, and that his publications record is outstanding." The addition of Professor Orne to the faculty will enable the School of Library Science to strengthen its work in university and research librarianship, in library buildings, and in library resources and collections.

University of North Carolina at Greensboro

Library Education/Instructional Media Program

Dr. Sigrid A. Trombley joined the faculty this year as an assistant professor in the Library Education/Instructional Media Program. Miss Trombley, a native of Hammond, Indiana, holds the B.S. degree from Indiana University, the M.S. degree in educational media from Purdue University, and the Ph.D. in instructional development and technology from Michigan State University. She will teach courses in the areas of instructional development, media theory, and media utilization, and will work with the School of Education undergraduate teacher education faculty to coordinate planning for the preparation of prospective teachers in media utilization. Miss Trombley replaces Michael Molenda, who resigned to accept appointment to the faculty of the Department of Instructional Systems Technology, School of Education, Indiana University.

The faculty is continuing to work on program development in Library Education/Instructional Media. The plans include the development of three concentrations at the master's degree level, replacing the single "library education" major now offered. Final plans are now being made for the concentration in "school media service," designed for the preparation of school media coordinators and reflecting the new state guidelines for this certification (replacing the "school librarian" certificate). A second area of concentration, "educational communications," will be designed to prepare personnel concentrating in audiovisual communications and instructional development for service as media specialists in school systems or schools, technical institutes, and community colleges. This program will be presented for state approval for the new certification as "media specialist." A third area of concentration, "library service," is projected for persons preparing for positions in technical institutes, community colleges, and related library service.

For the third time, UNC-G has been selected to conduct an EPDA program to recruit and prepare college graduates for employment as school media coordinators to fill positions for the 1973-74 school year. Cora Paul Bomar will coordinate the program which will be conducted under direction of the Division of Educational Media, State Department of Public Instruction, which was awarded a grant for this purpose under Part B, Subpart 2 of the Education Professions Development Act of 1967, P. L. 90-95.

UNC-G will implement this project on a contractual agreement with the North Carolina State Board of Education. The project is a program of initial professional preparation designed to attract and qualify college graduates who are members of minority groups for employment as school media coordinators. The program will consist of (1) sixteen weeks of intensive training during the 1973 Spring Semester, with these components: (a) orientation to school media service; (b) courses selected to meet the individual trainee's needs in operation of school media centers, utilization of instructional media, production of instructional media, organization of media collections, selection of media; (c) a minimum of thirty hours of supervised practicum in a school media center; and (d) observation, seminars, laboratory experience in audiovisual media and methods, and visits to exemplary school media programs, and (2) in-service education for trainees on the job during the 1973-74 academic year, with these components: (a) seminars organized by the project coordinator in cooperation with local school and administrative unit personnel; (b) dissemination of information on school media programs and publications to aid trainees; (c) attendance at professional meetings; and (d) field trips.

All courses included in the program represent regular course offerings in the degree program, School of Education, University of North Carolina at Greensboro except the Course Ed. 555 Operation of the School Media Center which will be designed for the trainees and will include with it the prescribed hours of practicum in a school media center. The other components will be provided under the direction of the project coordinator.

The program will be designed to provide initial preparation for a maximum of three (3) prospective school media coordinators. Eligibility for admission will be determined on the basis of (1) criteria set forth in the North Carolina State Plan, and (2) the requirements for admission to the Graduate School, University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

This project is designed to focus on the initial training of three persons who have been recruited from minority groups by the school systems who propose to employ the recruits after they have successfully completed the intensive training program. Tuition and registration fees will be paid by the project, and each trainee will receive a stipend of $75.00 per week for sixteen weeks.

Mary Frances K. Johnson has been invited to prepare, in collaboration with Dr. Phyllis Van Orden of Rutgers University, a position paper on "Library Education for the Future: The School Library," one of a series of papers commissioned by Martha Boaz, Dean, School of Library Science, University of Southern California, for a research project on "Library Education for the Future," funded by the Center for Advanced Study of Technology, U.S. Office of Education.

Cora Paul Bomar, past president of the Library Education Division of the American Library Association, is the LED representative serving on the Executive Board of the American Association of Library Schools.

W. Hugh Hagaman is serving on the program committee of the North Carolina Association of School Librarians to plan the 1972 fall work conference. Dr. Hagaman is also serving on the faculty for the academic year institute to prepare directors and assistant directors for learning centers, being conducted on Saturdays during 1972-73 by Bennett College.
